

A Detective Story

E-Smart Learning Centre

Once upon a time, there was a boy that looked like a normal person but his blood colour was different, not the same as humans. His blood colour was blue. He was called William.

When he was at university, there was a girl who saw his blood was blue. However, when William heard it, he was very scared and looked at that girl. Then, that girl fell down immediately when William looked at her. After a while, the teacher saw that girl had fallen down and called the police immediately.

Then, the police came and asked to review the CCTV. They saw William was looking at that girl but they didn't know why the girl was fell down. Suddenly, a teacher came and told the police that he knew the truth. He said, "William is not a normal person and shouted out his blood colour is blue. However, when someone shouted out his blood colour loudly, they will die or be hurt. Nobody knows why they will die or get hurt! But I know the reason why they are hurt! Because William is afraid of people who shout out his blood colour and he will kill them. William is not a normal human being!"

Although the police thought it was fake, they still had to trust that teacher. The next day, William disappeared. Nobody knew where he had gone.

Zoe Ko
WTE 6A

Should All Shops Be Closed On a Sunday?

I do not agree that all shops should be closed on a Sunday. Here are a few reasons.

If all shops are closed on a Sunday, it will cause a lot of inconvenience. Firstly, some families or singlers who do not know how to cook would be affected. For example, people who go out eating often cannot call for food. Some people are not willing to cook themselves as they are not good at it or they do not like cleaning after cooking. This causes people to have a bad mood in their limited and rare weekends!

Secondly, closing all shops on a Sunday inconvenience those who need to buy groceries or essential items. For example, some people who are busy for the whole week and leave work late are only free on Sundays. If shops were closed, they would not be able to buy things needed. This causes unnecessary difficulties to them.

Besides, shops closed on Sundays would lose a day to earn money. Some shops target travelers who usually come on weekends. If they lose their main types of customers, it would be hard for the shops to afford the expensive rent especially in Hong Kong. More shops would close down and damage the economy of Hong Kong, also leading to a vicious cycle.

In conclusion, as closing all shops on a Sunday causes inconvenience to people who do not know how to cook, busy workers who are only free on Sundays and causes damage to economy, I do not agree to close all shops on a Sunday.

Amelia Chau WTEBB

The small but intelligent ring.
If you would create a gadget, what would you create? Is it for hands or head? If I could create one, I would create "The small but intelligent ring."

Many children are struggling with their homework and I want to create a small thing (but the teacher won't know what it is) to pass tests, exams and homeworks.

I got this inspiration from my mother. When I was young, I saw that under her ring, there were words like "XX/XX/XXXX". Which was the date of her wedding. So I thought that if I could recreate rings to become "small but intelligent rings."

The ring has a question scanner. (When you face a hard question, shake your finger with the ring, then you would know what to write. It also comes with an invisible Scanner, not a blue one, not a white one, but a clear one. The ring also has many learning processors which will answer questions. Just in 5 seconds, it will automatically sense the question and write the answer down.

But, at the end of the day, cheating is not good. We should try our BEST!

A robbery

I saw a robbery on my way home after school one afternoon. I ran away and rushed home to call 999. The robbery hand had a gun and a knife. I saw the robber's hand had a bag.

Then I ran away as foot as I could to go home and called my mom and the police.

Finally the policeman caught the robber. He was upset but I was so happy.

Elsa Ng

4B-Sat 10:00

A Special Pill

"I have just invented a special pill that if people took it, people would stay awake for at least 24 hour. The most essential point of this pill is that there are no side effects at all. And I decided to sell the pill and too make money.

The customers who buy it the most are people who work long hour such as doctors and actors. Here, you will think why students will buy it, It is because they wanted to obtain a good grade by skipping sleep to study."

Jayden read from the newspaper and decided to buy the pill to cope their exams.

Jayden Luk Chun Ting
WTE 4A

