

White

White flows peacefully in the sky,
a river passing through the galaxy.

White is so lonely,
as empty as my tummy.

White is a light of hope,
where darkness fades away.

White is my favourite colour,
calm and delightful

Lam Tsz Tung
WTE6B

Should humans kill other animals for food?

Meat, one of the most important food resources for humans, is taken from the dead animal's body. For a long time, humans have killed a lot of other animals. But is it right to kill animals for food? My opinion is between yes and no. These are the reasons:

First, meat carries the largest amount of the food resources. That means meat is the common food in a family or in a wet market. If we stop killing animals, we lose the meat resources. That means we will lose one of the most important food resources and cause the decrease of food. That may cause some problems. The prices of other major food may increase; people eat less food and become less healthy (meat carries one of the most important protein resources of a human body).

Second, killing animals may destroy the food chains such as the producers ^{and} consumers. If the number of a particular animal decreases, it will change all the environment. More animals become endangered and that may cause the amount of some of the other resources to decrease because of the changes in the environment.

The real problems of this question is not yes or no. We need to balance two things at the same time. We need to ensure the income from food supply and the safety of the food chains. Humans now have better technology for making meat by not killing animals (cultivated meat) and that may become the solution to this problems. I hope our world becomes better!

Li Tsz Hin WTE8B

A day at the beach

Yesterday, it was a lovely day to go to the hot, Sunny beach. So my friend Harold and I decided to pack our things up and have a relaxing day at the beach. We weren't sure what to bring so we asked A.I what to bring. The A.I said the things we needed to bring:

- hats to keep us cool
- huge water bottles to keep us hydrated.
- a few pairs of long, tough boots to prevent having sand inside our socks
- a camping set (if you are staying overnight)

We packed all of these things and headed off to the beach! Since it was a weekday, there were fewer people.

When we arrived there, we took everything out and started playing together like crazy monkeys dancing and singing Kpop.

It was already 11:00 so we ate some delicious sandwiches.

After lunch, we played tag in the water. I forgot I had my phone in my pocket so it slipped out of my pocket and it broke because there was too much water (Even if I got a water-proof phone) It was time to go home and I finally realised that I lost my phone. So I went searching but I still couldn't find it. My friend Harold and I both agreed that today was the worst day ever in my life.

Persens Wong WTE4A

The first time I did something
Yesterday afternoon, I went to the beach with my family...

"Good morning! Dad, Mom." "Good morning," they replied, "We're planning to go to the beach; do you want to join us?" "Sure!"

When we arrived there, I found a good place on the beach to build a sandcastle, and I went to get some sea water. It was the first time that I attempted to build a sandcastle.

First, I used the toy model to do the shape.

Next, I made the small parts with details to make it more beautiful and look stronger.

After that, I built another one so that it was a twin.

Finally, I made it! "Mom, Dad, I've finished it!" We are happy, but then...

A large wave rushed up to cover my sandcastle; however, it stood up to the wave! I was so happy that my sandcastle didn't dissolve!

We had a wonderful day with good weather which didn't disrupt our peace and quiet.

WTE UB
Tony Chen